ENGINEERING EXPERIENCE

Diminishing Patient Non-Compliance in Physical Therapy using Motion Capture Technologies May-July 2014

Gustavo Vejarano, PhD in the LMU Electrical Engineering and Computer Science Department

Research Assistant

- Evaluated and analyzed the theory and mechanics of wireless sensor nodes and the code written in C#
- Discovered the idea to apply these wireless sensor nodes to assist patients going through physical therapy
- Designed the proposed software program in efforts to assist patients perform exercises with correct alignment and provide immediate feedback
- Self-implemented and self-assessed the proposed program by performing the supine-grip bicep curl for validation

LMU Engineering Clean Water Project, Isla Espiritu Santo, El Salvador

January 2013

Engineer Volunteer/Translator

- Planned for this student-driven project 2 months prior to the week-long trip to assign responsibilities and ultimately, successfully install an Ultra-Violet filter for the only clinic on the island
- Collaborated with 7 LMU student engineers in distributing over 60 table-top filters (1filter/household), teaching how to assemble and carry proper maintenance
- Collected and analyzed filtered water from 30 table-top filters that were distributed the prior year
- Organized a community meeting to discuss on the importance of clean water and share our findings in our bacteria testings

Bellflower City Hall, Bellflower, CA

June 2012

Community Development Volunteer/Intern

- Researched on assigned projects related to zoning, building, and property maintenance codes
- Quickly learned software programs to assist the city, senior, and associate planners with their projects
- Observed 3 formal plan examinations and accompanied the Building Official on personal field inspections
- Went beyond what was expected with assigned projects and also reached out to help translate in the front desk
